Jeep has sought to portray the car as the ultimate vehicle for adventure seekers who love exploring the uncharted path. This has proven to be more than marketing talk, for the Wrangler has proven a reliable off road winner. Its ability to drive through bush, rocky terrain, ice, and other unsavory weather conditions makes it a phenomenal car. Unlike other SUVs that might pride themselves on their speed or size, the Wrangler is not a car for everyone. To learn more about this tough SUV and why you might want one, read on below.Origins of the Jeep WranglerBehind the Wrangler stands a history that goes back to the Second World War. While the Wrangler was not in existence at that time, there in the annals of war history, you can find its direct predecessors. The original Jeep was a military utility vehicle used by the US Army to move manpower reliably in the war theater.The Jeep was such a successful and reliable vehicle that, after the war, demand for its four wheel drive technology soared among civilian buyers. The Wrangler was the eventual result of successive innovations to make a Jeep suited for recreational use.Jeep Moab – Best Overall Jeep WranglerWith multiple Jeep Wrangler models to choose from, Jeep shoppers are spoilt for selection. This can make it tricky knowing which Wrangler is right for you. There is little doubt, however, that the Jeep Wrangler Moab is the ultimate vehicle in the lineup. It’s best for those who want the latest and most complete Jeep technology updates. The 2019 Wrangler Moab features a V6 engine is capable of 285 hp. Exclusive features include Selec Trac 4X4 driving system, leather trim interior, and Jeep Performance Parts Rock Rails.Wrangler Rubicon – Best for Off Road EnthusiastsThe Wrangler Rubicon model stands out from the other vehicles in the Wrangler lineup due to its suitability for off road activities. This model is named after the Rubicon off road trail in California, a tough trail whose challenge the Wrangler makes its home. With a 285 hp V6 cylinder engine, six-speed manual transmission, and 33-inch BF Goodrich K02, it’s ready made for adventure. The Rubicon starts at between $38,000 and $40,000. Optional upgrades will cost extra.Wrangler Sport – Budget-Friendly WranglerWhile Wrangler models are not cheap, for those looking to save some money, the Wrangler Sport is the best option. This model is available starting at between $28,000 and $29,000. It takes a minimalistic approach that sticks to the history of Jeeps in general, but is available in both a two-door and a four-door model. It comes with 17 inch by 7.5 inch wheels that are styled in black steel. The model comes with a 3.6L Pentastar V6 engine for sporting performance. Jeep Sahara – Best for Family OutingsWith sitting room for five and enhanced ride comfort features, the Wrangler Sahara model is a natural fit for families. Not only does it fit more people than other Wrangler variants, but it departs from typical Wrangler design by adding more creature comforts. The Sahara has 18 inch polished aluminum wheels, a 2.0L direct injection turbo engine for improved city commute gas efficiency, and Selec-Trac four by four system. Its Sky-One Power Top is retractable. At the push of a button you can remove it and be able to see the sky or stand up out of the car for sightseeing.Buying a Jeep WranglerThere are Jeep dealerships right around the country where you can purchase your Wrangler. If you are purchasing used, there are even more buying options, from scouting owners in your area looking to sell, to checking sites like Craigslist. There are several good reasons to buy used. First, if you are going on off-road adventures, you might not want or need the extra burden of doing that in a brand new car. A used car will cost you less and it is easier to justify the beating it will take in the outdoors. The real advantage of owning a Wrangler, however, is that it’s a long-lived car that will take just about anything you throw at it. MORE FROM LIFE123.COM When you need to locate a dealer that sells or services Jeep vehicles, there are a few ways to find one. You can search through the Jeep website, a partner website, online sources or a printed phone directory.Jeep Website Find a Dealer ToolOne quick way to find the closest dealer for Jeep is to visit the company website’s dealer locator web page. If you allow the website to use your location, the list of Jeep dealerships will automatically be generated by the site. You also have the option to enter your city and state or your zip code to find the nearest Jeep dealer. From the results page, you can view the inventory at the nearest dealership. You can see the dealers address and phone number. You can also get directions to the facility or see the hours of the sales department or service department.Partner WebsitesWhen you’re looking for used Jeep dealers, a second way to find one is by locating a partner company. For example, Fiat Chrysler owns the Jeep brand. So, a Chrysler dealer, such as a Dodge dealer, is likely to also carry a number of Jeep vehicles. Just be sure to call ahead and confirm that the dealership also carries Jeep vehicles before visiting to shop for cars or get your Jeep serviced.Online DirectoriesUsing an online directory is a way to widen or narrow your search results by changing a few key search parameters. Enter a search term, such as Jeep dealer in the search box, and then add your city and state or your zip code to the location box. If you want to search within a specific number of miles, switch to the Advanced Search tool and note the maximum distance you’re willing to travel to reach a Jeep dealer. Examine the results on the map or by checking the names, addresses and phone numbers of local Jeep dealerships.Printed Phone DirectorySearching through the alphabetical listings in a printed phone directory is a way to find the address and phone number of the nearest Jeep dealership. In the white pages, look under J and browse through the list until you reach Jeep. If that doesn’t provide results, turn to the business listings in the back, which will typically be printed on yellow paper. Look under A for auto dealerships, or auto sales, or under C for car dealers or car sales.Online Map ToolBring up an online map or the map tool in your smartphone, and run a query for Jeep dealers. Choose the nearest pin on the map, and if needed, request directions to get to the dealership. TheCarConnection.com’s resident off-roaders also drove the new Wrangler to help you decide which reviews to trust where opinions differ, and to add more impressions and details and provide you with the best information. It's an American icon--and this year, the 2008 Jeep Wrangler returns in two- and four-door forms, with a choice of soft and hardtops, rear- and four-wheel drive. The 2008 Jeep Wrangler's sole engine is a 3.8-liter, 202-horsepower V-6 engine. The V-6 comes with either a six-speed manual or four-speed automatic transmission. Fuel economy on rear-drive, manual-transmission models is as high as 16/21 mpg, which is good for the Wrangler lineup but not particularly economical. The engine feels stronger than any Jeep before, but it still makes more noise than you might expect if you're coming from a more traditional SUV. When the new Wrangler arrived in 2007, it brought a four-door, extended-wheelbase Unlimited model to the lineup, a Wrangler first. Also, Jeep added a new three-piece Freedom Top hardtop that's easier to manage than the former one-piece design. The two-doors still offer a hardtop as well as a Sunrider soft top with a front portion that folds back without having to be completely stowed. The removable tops are one of the best features of the Jeep--though they allow lots of road noise in the cabin, they can completely open the cabin of both the two- and four-door models, turning the 2008 Jeep Wrangler into a convertible SUV.Review continues below Off-roading toughness of both Jeeps is assured by live axle front and rear suspensions, with 10.2 inches of ground clearance and the availability of a heavy-duty four-wheel-drive system with heavy-duty axles, locking differentials, Rock-Trac transfer case with extra-low gearing, electronically disconnecting stabilizer bar, and knobby BF Goodrich tires on Rubicon versions. There are few places you can't get to in a Jeep. On the highway, the off-road capability translates into a jittery, bouncy ride with plenty of road noise and imprecise steering. It's far better than before, and it's simply a part of the experience of owning a Jeep that tends to wear thin the older you (and the Wrangler) get. Though the classic lines remain, the Wrangler is just a year old in its current form. New for 2007, the current Wrangler is larger (and wider) than the previous model. It also has more interior room. The front seats are fine for short trips but lack the support needed for long journeys. The backseats in the Unlimited model don't have enough legroom for adults, but kids probably won't object. The cabin is made from rugged and durable materials, so don't expect a runway experience, unless the runway you have in mind is O'Hare. Anti-lock brakes and stability control are now standard, with side impact airbags available optionally. The 2008 Jeep Wrangler scores five-star ratings for front and side impact protection. Two-wheel-drive models have four-star rollover protection, while four-wheel drivers have a three-star rating. Tire pressure monitors are now standard on both short- and long-wheelbase Wranglers, and remote start is a new option for 2008. Air conditioning and cruise control are standard on most models, and Sirius Satellite Radio is an option, as is a navigation system and a music hard drive.
